

Guidelines for Dual Credit Accommodations

Accommodations for dual credit courses will be arranged within the high school that the student attends.

These accommodations will follow the guidelines of college level accommodations, and follow the same standards as students who attend classes on College of Eastern Idaho's campus. If the student has an IEP or a 504, dual credit accommodations may be different.

Accommodations for dual credit cannot alter the course material or the course outcomes. The same work is always completed, but it may be completed or accessed in a different way.

The standard that is followed with all accommodations is "access". We want all students to have fair access to material, and to be able to show what they have learned.

Examples of appropriate accommodations:

"The student will be provided with extended time on all in class exams and quizzes."

"The student will have access to all books in digital format to allow for the use of a screen reader."

Examples of inappropriate accommodations for dual credit:

"The student will only complete the even answers on homework assignments."

"The student will be allowed to use their textbook on all tests."

If there any questions about specific accommodations for dual credit students, call Hailey Holland, the Disability Services Coordinator at College of Eastern Idaho at 208-535-5314. Our goal is to maintain open communication between the high schools and College of Eastern Idaho regarding disability accommodations.
